

Will Digital Applications in Agriculture Revitalize the Sector?

The 30th issue of Strategy magazine, prepared quarterly with the support of Akfen Holding, has been published.

During the pandemic, the Strategy magazine was made publicly available, entirely digital, and free to download easily on mobile devices. The new issue of the Strategy magazine covers important topics.

Prepared in both English and Turkish with the slogan "Read Tomorrow Today," the cover of the 30th issue of Strategy magazine addresses the theme "Will Digital Applications in Agriculture Revitalize the Sector?" This theme discusses the global reduction in agricultural lands, farmers abandoning their lands, and how factors like climate change are pushing agricultural production into a deadlock, and whether digital applications can offer solutions to this challenging process.

Additionally, this issue of the magazine covers Turkey's new economic reform process, expected improvements, and developments resulting from economic policies, and the new economic route. Experts evaluate the anticipated developments in response to economic policies on the roadmap of the administration, which is trying to diversify public revenue sources through interest rate hikes, credit contraction, and the restriction of installment opportunities.

The new issue of Strategy magazine also offers in-depth analyses and opinions on technological, social, and sustainability topics, in addition to the economy. This issue covers significant topics such as the new energy economies in the world, the startup economy, the football economy, new steps in artificial intelligence, and Fortune's "Best Companies to Work For" list. The new issue of Strategy magazine can be accessed for free via Akfen Holding's official website or through the link
